Food for Thought

Watering, sunlight, and insects are all important components of a healthy garden. What are some important things that you need every day to keep you healthy?

Gardening has been viewed as an art form for hundreds of years in many countries around the world. Many homes and schools around the country are getting into gardening as part of their everyday lives and education. Gardens can teach many things, such as, food security and the efforts it takes to grow food, the environmental impact weather and climate has on various plant and animal life, as well as, promote positive mental and emotional health.

Photography is an important art form that instantly captures a moment in time the photographer feels is important to remember. Have you ever seen a photograph that instantly took you back to that memory? What is your favorite photograph and describe the emotions you feel when you look at it?
